

REDEEM THE STATE

Strong Plea for Manly Political Action Made by

HON. M. CLYDE KELLY

Initiative and Referendum the Means by Which the People May Regain Control.

The address in the Court House Monday night by Hon. M. Clyde Kelly, the leader of those who, in the last House at Harrisburg, had the courage of their convictions and vigorously opposed the Penrose machine and stood for the rights of the people. His talk was interesting from start to finish, and his telling throughout the state of the manner in which laws are made or killed by the gang at Harrisburg will have the effect of causing the populace of the Commonwealth to realize that there is need of better government in Pennsylvania.

HON. M. CLYDE KELLY

We quote from his address: "It is my firm belief from observation and experience both in political contests and in the law making body of this state that we are living under a despotism, that the people are by no means in control and that our boasted representative government is in reality, a systematic misrepresentation of the will and desire of the people. "The battle for the Public Good in Pennsylvania is a stupendous fight because of the cohesive power of public plunder. Many men are making fortunes through the system by which Pennsylvania is misgoverned. Scheming politicians and place holders, the grafting and job hungry gang, and corrupt business men are making a huge profit from the belief of the people in this state in a delusion, the delusion that we have a representative government—that all men are free and equal and that the citizenship really rules. "With all the mighty power back of it, you need not be astonished at the reception any one will get when he protests against this unjust tyranny and betrayal of a people. I was jeered and hooted and hissed in the House of Representatives simply because I insisted in speaking out in protest, and on one occasion a riot followed the attempt to secure fair play. I might very easily have won a reputation as a good fellow by simply bowing to the despotism that ruled with such an iron hand. But though I desire the good will and friendship of all, I will not bury justice and right in the grave simply to be called a "good fellow" by the gang. "The Legislature at Harrisburg, under the present system, does not and cannot represent the people. Every detail of the procedure is in the hands of the enemies of the people; the rules, the committees, the Speaker's authority, the caucus tyranny have all been made instruments in organized and systematic misrepresentation of the wishes of the people and their best interests. "I can not and will not believe that the honest and intelligent citizens of this state look with indifference upon such a dangerous situation and are careless as to whether or not it is remedied. I do believe that they want to end such unholy domination, that they are coming to realize our deplorable position politically and are firmly determined to end it. "That being true, what is the remedy? In my mind there is an easy and effective one through which the people can resume the rights that have been stolen from them, can enter again upon the heritage of which they have been despoiled. That is through the Initiative and Referendum, forming a sure defense for the people against a traitorous combination of corrupt interests. With these rights they can enact the legislation they desire when the law making body refuses to enact it, they can defeat the legislation they do not desire when passed by the legislative body. "To secure the passage of an amendment to the state constitution giving the people the right of Initiative and Referendum is a comparatively easy task. It can be done at the next session of the Legislature if every honest, intelligent citizen will absolutely refuse to vote for any can-

Largest Crowd of Season Witnessed Signal Victory on Wednesday at North Side Park.

Since the last issue of The Gazette two well-played games of baseball have been witnessed at North Side Park. Both games were clean and well and rapidly played. Baylor's pitching against the Blair Countians, and Leasure's battle with the men of beads and blankets showed superior ability in the box; they are both first class.

The nomadic followers of former trails, who have replaced the tomahawk and the bow and arrow with the bat and ball, missed the course somewhat of their ancestors when they reached the scene of the ancient fort along the Raystown Branch. Though their captors did not ruthlessly tear their blankets and iconoclastically break their beads, but honestly defeated them upon what was in fact a field of honor (for which both sides deserve credit). They left yesterday morning without the scalp of victory dangling at their belts.

MENTIONED IN BRIEF

Many Items of Interest From Town and County.

Let us all turn out to the union picnic next Thursday at Mt. Dallas. A baby boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Dahl on Tuesday.

Yes, it's the same "Billy" Bruner you used to know, and you want to hear him now.

At the annual picnic at Kilcoin's grove this week about $175 was realized for the benefit of St. Thomas' Catholic Church.

In the show window of Mrs. Lyon's Little Antique Shop there is a boot, shirt and vest worn by Tom Thumb when he was 25 years old.

Harvey Alexander Shaffer of Everett and Mary Elizabeth Nycum of Clearville were granted a marriage license in Cumberland on Wednesday.

W. O. Bruner, who will lecture in Assembly Hall tonight, ranked as a qualified marksman on big guns and was honorably discharged from the Navy as a sharpshooter.

Again the "run was bloody," Everett lost to the Indians yesterday 9 to 1. Too bad it was picnic day—and the Everett papers had been issued for the week. Accept sympathy. Our townsman J. E. Evans is doubly pleased at having a grandson and a namesake, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Evans, of Uniontown, being named Edward Weber Evans.

Mrs. J. C. Russell and saleslady, Miss Margaret Sproat, will leave this evening for New York and Philadelphia to purchase their fall millinery. They will be accompanied on their return, August 28, by Miss Anna Mull, trimmer.

By attending tonight's lecture you'll profit; then, too, you'll be giving the fire laddies a lift.

Dr. W. C. Minnich, son of Postmaster William J. Minnich, has been made chief surgeon of the Pressed Steel Car Company, with jurisdiction over both the McKees Rocks and Allegheny plants. He assumed his new position this week.

FRUIT GROWERS MEET

Arrangements Made for December Display—Topics Discussed.

The Bedford County Fruit Growers' Association met in the Court House at 1:45 p. m., on August 8, with A. C. Richards in the chair. The auditing committee was continued to make a report at some future meeting. The plan of combining the Fruit Shippers' and Fruit Growers' associations was discussed by W. F. Biddle, J. I. Barley, A. A. Hyde and A. C. Richards. Mr. A. B. Ross, on motion of Dr. Gump, was placed on the committee on co-operation. On motion of W. F. Biddle a committee was named to take charge of the exhibit and to look after and arrange for the display at our annual meeting in December.

An encouraging short address was made by J. Y. Boor. A. C. Richards made a few remarks, urging every one to bring the best of their fruit to the annual meeting for exhibition. The committee on exhibition consists of Dr. S. H. Gump, J. I. Barley, A. A. Hyde, W. F. Biddle, A. S. Guyer, Lloyd Wright, A. S. Otto, Ross Drenning, W. P. It is the earnest desire of the Association that the committee urge the persons in their respective sections to commence at once to do all in their power to have their friends come to the annual meeting in December and to bring plenty of fine fruit along in order to make this meeting the most important we have ever had.

EDUCATIONAL MEETING

Broad Top Begins School Year With Enthusiastic Gathering.

The first of a series of educational meetings to be held in Broad Top Township during the present school year was held at Finleyville recently with an appreciative audience in attendance.

The meeting was called to order and was presided over by Director C. W. Thomas, who in a few well chosen remarks, stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of arousing a greater interest in the educational affairs of the district, to get a better understanding of the workings of the schools and to create a better spirit of co-operation among parents, school officers and teachers. After these introductory remarks the chairman introduced Mr. Lauder, President of the school board, an ex-member of the School Commission appointed by Governor Stuart and at present a member of the State Board of Education, as the first speaker. We had not promised in our notices for this meeting that we would have with us any imported talent for we all felt that we were highly honored in having such a man as Mr. Lauder with us to speak to us and we were not disappointed for he was at his best and for nearly an hour interested as well as instructed us with his remarks on The History, the Problems, and the Revision of the School System of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Lauder prefaced his address by impressing upon us the importance of proper training of the child in the home in the three great laws of Obedience, Truth and Justice. He said that if these were properly taught in the home before the child is sent to school, the work of the teacher would not only be more pleasant but that it would be more effective. He showed by concrete examples that many of the school troubles are due to a violation of these three laws in the home.

In speaking of the History of the school system of Pennsylvania, Mr. Lauder referred to the opposition its champions had to meet, the way in which the opposition was met, and the results of the work of its defenders. The Problems were so many and so varied that in order to satisfy the demands of all, our School Laws had to be revised and re-revised until they became a problem of themselves which required an expert to untangle them. As a result of all this a movement was put on foot to revise and recodify the whole school system of Pennsylvania which has resulted in the present School Code under which our schools will hereafter be governed. And in order that this may be done intelligently, it is necessary that we have a clear understanding of the same. He said that there are three rights to which every child is entitled and that these rights were kept in mind while the School Code was being built—these are a good Home, a good School, and a good Church, none of which can be enjoyed without the proper environments. In his remarks on the Code, Mr. Lauder dwelt more particularly on the duties of School Directors, qualifications of Teachers, Compulsory Attendance and Medical Inspection. He closed with a few remarks to the voters of Broad Top Township with reference to their duty in the selection of competent school directors so that their district may continue to enjoy the distinction of being one of the foremost rural school districts in the state.

The next speaker was Mr. Brumbaugh who is now serving his twelfth year in the interests of the boys and girls of Broad Top Township—two years as teacher and 10 years as supervisor. His remarks were to be confined mainly to the improvements of the schools of the district under the present system. As our time was limited he was given liberty to change his topic and speak "As the spirit moved him." He referred to the meetings, similar to this one, that were held in different parts of the township in 1886, 1897 and 1898 for the purpose of creating a better school sentiment, and expressed his wish that this might be only the beginning of a mighty awakening of the educational interests of Broad Top Township. As a basis for his remarks he quoted from Hon. Charles Skinner the saying that "Among the greatest obstacles facing our public schools today is the ignorance of the public concerning the inner working of the schools, the indifference of the parents to the educational welfare of their children, and the want of sympathetic co-operation between the home and the school, between parent and teacher." He hoped that by means of these public meetings it might be possible to remove the said obstacles, at least in part, and as a result we might enjoy better school advantages for our children, and thus gain for them a more enviable position in life. He also spoke of the duties and responsibilities of the Directors and pleaded with the parents to be more charitably disposed towards them. Many of the parents who find fault with the work of the School Director would not deny himself of one-half the pleasures, the rest and the comforts that are surrendered by the conscientious director in the discharge of his duties; and all without pay. Some of the subjects touched on by Mr. Lauder were taken up and emphasized. Among them, Holidays, Socialism, Alien Taxation and Medical Inspection.

Mr. McElwee was next called on to tell of some of his experiences as a School Director which was responded to in a few appropriate remarks after which the meeting was adjourned to be called some time during August at Langdondale or somewhere in Sherman's Valley. An effort will be made to secure talent from without the district to assist in these meetings.

The people of the Finleyville district are to be commended for the interest they are showing in things educational and religious. They have succeeded in securing for the use of their children a fine two-room school building and a beautiful little Sunday School Chapel, and are just now assisting the school district in erecting a substantial wire fence around their school lot, as well as around their church lot.

Soft-Toned Bells of China.
The natives of China use large bells of their own make in many of their temples and monasteries, writes the United States consul at Foochow. I have noticed all through Japan and China that the tone of the monastery and temple bells is very soft and smooth, due to the superior quality of the material used in their manufacture and to the absence of iron clappers, the result being a marvelous softness and mellowness of tone. The bells are never swung, being always suspended in a fixed frame, and the sound is produced by striking them on the outer edge with a wooden mallet. This makes the soft tones which are so delightfully melodious.

A Helixville Gathering

So Does Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Croup and Asthma.

You can easily tell by reading the symptoms below, whether you have catarrh or not:

Offensive breath, frequent sneezing, discharge from the nose, stoppage of the nose, huskiness of the voice, tickling in throat, droppings in throat, a cough, pain in chest, loss of strength, variable appetite, spasms of coughing, low spirited at times, raising of mucus, difficulty in breathing, loss of vital force.

F. W. Jordan has a sensible remedy (money back if it fails) for catarrh, called HYOMEI (pronounced High-o-me) which is a vaporized air, so antiseptic, that when it is breathed over the inflamed and germ-infested membrane, it kills all germ life, gives relief in two minutes and cures catarrh.

The price, including hard rubber pocket inhaler, is only $1.00. The inhaler will last a lifetime, so that should you need a second bottle of HYOMEI, you can get it for 50 cents.

BUILDING GOOD ROADS

Association Will Not Interfere in Personal Affairs.

The following letter was written today in answer to an appeal for help from a man who had been arrested and fined for filling in breakers. I think the letter is largely self explanatory. At any rate it outlines, as I understand it, the general policy of the Association. Here it is:

Schellsburg, August 5, 1911.

Mr. W. R. Edwards,

1202 7th Ave., Altoona, Pa.

Dear Sir:—Answering your favor of yesterday, I would say: I am not speaking for the Good Roads Association in this answer, your appeal having been directed to me; and I shall submit your matter to the Association; but I fully expect that they will negative your request for help, and for the following reasons:

You state that you were arrested and fined for "filling in three wagon and rig breakers" on the road passing your property. I do not know what steps you had previously taken, nor whether you simply filled in the places so that the course of the water was changed; nor have I time to go and see; for the investigation could not lead to anything.

You had a plain legal remedy and you chose not to take it. Had you applied to the proper authorities, or even to our Association, steps would have been taken to correct illegal conditions in the road. While our Association has not as yet extended its work into your township, we would have done all we could to help you proceed in a legal manner to get your rights. But we do not stand back of disorderly and intemperate methods of procuring redress. Were we to back you in your fight it would simply be an invitation to every man in the county to interfere with the work the Supervisors are doing and to cast the burden of his interference on us. That would lead to a confusion and antagonism that would be more intolerable than the worst condition into which the roads have gotten in our county.

The condition of your road was largely local and personal to you. It can only become of importance to us when, turned over to us in an orderly and decent manner, it becomes a part of a large economic scheme, viz: the renovation of the entire road system of the county with a view to establishing permanent comfort and increasing permanent values. We were not organized to interfere in or to precipitate local fights; but to proceed soberly and with dignity to handle a community problem.

Your own action in bringing about the clash with your local supervisors when you undertook to administer the law, instead of leaving the matter to the proper tribunal, bars you from help at the hands of the Association.

Moreover, your mistake has not only hurt yourself, but may tend to hurt the Association. Your action was lawless; we propose to be law-abiding. We want the community to understand that, while we are fighting for good roads, we are fighting as far as we may, with the pen instead of with the sword; that we invoke the law only when the stubborn pursuit of illegality on the part of the Supervisors makes such a course necessary. To connect ourselves with any law suit against supervisors, therefore, requires on our part such preliminary care and such a collection of evidence as shows that we are compelled to accept illegal roads or to fight. We want it distinctly and publicly understood that we are not connected and will not be with any such precipitate and probably uncalled for action as was taken in your case. Nor will we, naturally, be connected with any local fight which we have not deliberately precipitated as an Association after we have found it to be necessary as a means to the end in view. Very truly yours,

A. B. Ross.

A very similar case was spoken of to me today by one of our supervisors, and we are going to investigate it next week. This supervisor, who is trying his best to respond to our call for good roads, asked me as to what the legal rights of the supervisors are in the premises.

So far we have been getting results, not all that we want but a fair measure, by being decent and orderly and law abiding; and as the movement progresses we will get more results. We are trying to work in a friendly way with all supervisors and road masters; and as they find this out more and more, we expect to get the very best out of them, as we are prepared to give them our most hearty support. The incident referred to in the foregoing letter is unfortunate; but our course in regard thereto seems very clear to me, though it has not yet been passed on by our Association.

I have a very encouraging letter from our friend, Mr. Clayton Smith of Friend's Cove, where they are getting some results and hope for still more.

Government Engineer Coming

While in Washington last week I arranged for a Government Engineer to come out here, probably during September, and with the help of a crew to be assembled here, to build some sections of road and show us how to do it, on clay, sand and shale land, explaining the reason for each step as he takes it, and making the road building a public holiday occasion. To this all citizens, as well as supervisors and road masters, will be asked to come; the more we know, the cleaner we sweep the intellectual corners of the cob-webs of road traditions and prejudices, the sooner the community will demand and have a fine system of roads. A. B. Ross.

Many a Suffering Woman

Drags herself painfully through her daily tasks, suffering from backache, headache, nervousness, loss of appetite and poor sleep, not knowing her ills are due to kidney and bladder troubles. Foley Kidney Pills give quick relief from pain and misery and a prompt return to health and strength. No woman who so suffers can afford to overlook Foley Kidney Pills. E. D. Heckerman.

Wings

To glad youth, when pleasure sings,
Joy comes swift on rapturous wings;
Age, oppressed with sorrows deep,
Longs for rest on wings of sleep.

For the young new blossoms ope;
Each new morn shows glowing hope:
To the old with battle scars
Starlit night brings end of wars.

Youth has vision keen to scan
Happiness in all life's plan:
Age has sweeter memories still—
Love with peace its heart doeth fill.

Life yields youth new happiness,
Wings of Love give their caress:
Wings of age on memory rise,
Seeking gates of Paradise.

Loss of Time Means Loss of Pay

Kidney trouble and the ills it breeds means lost time and lost pay to many a working man. M. Balent, 1214 Little Penna St., Streator, Ill., was so bad from kidney and bladder trouble that he could not work, but he says: "I took Foley Kidney Pills for only a short time and got entirely well and was soon able to go back to work, and am feeling well and healthier than before." Foley Kidney Pills are tonic in action, quick in results—a good friend to the working man or woman who suffers from kidney ills. E. D. Heckerman.

"You may send me up the complete work of Shakespeare, Goethe and Emerson—also something to read."

"I'd like to dance and I should dance, only the music puts me out and the girl gets in my way."

"Yes, her husband robbed her of every cent she had—and just think, she only married him because she was afraid of burglars!"

"Hello! Is this the butcher? Well, you may send me up a roast of beef, and remember, please, butcher, to have it rare. That's the only way my husband can eat it."—Boston Transcript

Don't use harsh physics. The reaction weakens the bowels, leads to chronic constipation. Get Doan's Regulents. They operate easily, tone the stomach, cure constipation.

Question Too Personal.
"I had a mighty queer surprise this morning," remarked a local stock broker. "I put on my last year's suit and in one of the trousers' pockets I found a big roll of bills which I had entirely forgotten."

"Were any of them receipted?" asked a listener who seemed to be a pessimist.

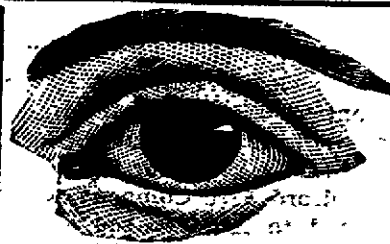

And the temperature dropped immediately to a point where everybody felt comfortable.

Do not allow your kidney and bladder trouble to develop beyond the reach of medicine. Take Foley Kidney Pills. They give quick results and stop irregularities with surprising promptness. E. D. Heckerman.

Afraid of Ghosts

Many people are afraid of ghosts. Few people are afraid of germs. Yet the ghost is a fancy and the germ is a fact. If the germ could be magnified, to a size equal to its terrors it would appear more terrible than any fire-breathing dragon. Germs can't be avoided. They are in the air we breathe, the water we drink.

The germ can only prosper when the condition of the system gives it free scope to establish itself and develop. When there is a deficiency of vital force, languor, restlessness, a sallow cheek, a hollow eye, when the appetite is poor and the sleep is broken, it is time to guard against the germ. You can fortify the body against all germs by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It increases the vital power, cleanses the system of clogging impurities, enriches the blood, puts the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition in working condition, so that the germ finds no weak or tainted spot in which to breed. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients printed on its outside wrapper. It is not a secret nostrum but a medicine of known composition and with a record of 40 years of cures. Accept no substitute—there is nothing "just as good." Ask your neighbors.

What He Wanted.

It was after the explosion, and Henderson sat on a rail fence gazing ruefully over the scene of ruin. One of his wheels was still rolling onward over the pile. Another hung from the limb of a tree. Other sections of the car were strewn about the highway, far and near.

"Ah me!" sighed Henderson. "To think that only last night I was inveighing against an assembled car! By Jove! I'd give $100 to anybody who'd come along at this very minute and assemble mine."—Harper's Week-

HIS NAME MOST APPROPRIATE

"Knapp" It Was and Drowsy Delegate Proceeded to Live Up to Cognomen.

During the morning prior to the opening of the national convention, a special meeting of those delegates already arrived was held to discuss and vote on some preliminary measures. These met in a smaller hall, opposite the convention hall, and when they were all as bled in the stuffy room, one of the members leaned back wearily in his chair and promptly fell asleep.

After an hour's session, the chairman called a vote on a certain measure. All responded but the sleeper, whose snores now and then echoed through the room.

"Here! wake that man up!" demanded the chairman, at this point "What's his name, anyway?"

No one being able to tell, and no one following the chairman's order to wake the sleeper up, that functionary at once called upon a ballot clerk to carry out the order. So accordingly the clerk hurried down the aisle to the dozer, shook him vigorously by the arm, asking him his name the while.

With a broken snore that perforated the atmosphere, the sleeper awoke "What's his name?" as in called out the impatient chairman.

At this, the clerk straightened up from the unknown member's chair, and announced, to the accompaniment of a roar of laughter

"Mr. chairman, he says his name is Knapp."—Judge's Library.

FRIDAY MORNING, AUG. 11, 1911.

A STRANGE JUSTIFICATION

In his testimony before a Congressional investigation committee President Theodore Roosevelt justified his action in permitting the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company by the U. S. Steel Company on the ground that by so doing he averted a panic. This is, indeed, a strange doctrine.

If the U. S. Steel Company could bring about a panic under conditions as they then existed, how much more easily could they produce the same result with the added power which became theirs by the absorption of a rival company?

It is an accepted fact that Wall Street can produce a financial panic at will, and the granting of additional power to such a concern only increases the power of the great money power. To be brief and to the point and to say the least it is a dangerous precedent, and in addition it only increased the power of a combination that, in this very deal, displayed the ability to dictate terms to the national government. A presumably trust-busting President surely shot wide of the mark.

didate for the Legislature who will not pledge himself publicly to support this measure. Even at the last session, with no state wide agitation, with every possible obstacle thrown in its way, the amendment passed on third reading fairly, even though it was declared defeated by the Speaker.

"All that is necessary is for you and me to demand that our representatives really represent us. When they are asking us for votes not one will dare say we are not intelligent enough to vote on legislation. Then retire every man who has been a part of the Penrose machine and elect only honest representatives who will gladly vote to give their rights to a betrayed people and the battle is won."

Those who assisted in furnishing music for the occasion deserve credit as well as those who were instrumental in securing his service and those who conducted the meeting.

The compliment paid to Hon. John T. Matt on his legislative record should be appreciated by the Representative from this county.

HECKERMAN LETTER

Correspondent Discovers New Way to Remove Cider From the Eye.

Athens, Tenn., Aug. 7, 1911.

This is not the Athens of old or the learned Athens of Greece, but nevertheless, it is a very old Athens, one of the oldest towns in the state and for one to look at some of the buildings he is very readily convinced as to the age. Why one building has a tin roof on it that I am told was put on 75 years ago and it still turns water. With all the age and poor streets, the Magill Hotel is not so old in its ways, by any means, and with a few men like G. F. Lockmiller one would think themselves in an up-to-date city. Mr. Lockmiller has a store far superior to any of its kind in Bedford and he is one of the most pleasant men one meets, one of the kind who knows what he wants and how much of any article he needs. He says he struck a good thing when he first bought Fort Bedford P-nut butter.

Here the court house stands in the middle of the square as do so many of these temples in this state. I only wish that our farmers had as much good corn as one sees in passing along through the entire south.

While riding one day recently with windows up, I was unfortunate enough to get a large cinder in my eye. I tried to remove it with my handkerchief and all other trustworthy methods that I knew of—but all in vain. A young lady across the aisle gave me a piece of gum to chew until it would get soft. I did this. She then took the gum, moistened her fingers so the gum would not stick to them, then twisted the gum to a point, placing the point on the offending cinder which immediately came out. This way is perfectly safe. The eye being moist, the gum cannot stick or in any way injure it, but will quickly collect and hold any foreign matter.

I just heard of a family that had been poisoned by eating tainted meat. Last Saturday they bought some and it was prepared for Sunday dinner. Each one partook of the meat and soon afterwards each one was taken violently ill, ptomaine poisoning having set in. Be careful about the fresh meat that you buy.

A sort of a bug or beetle has lately shown itself in the Southern pine forests and is doing much harm among the living timber, and those in position to know fear that it's boring into the trees will in all probability do a great amount of injury unless checked by the application of scientific treatment. Many years ago this same sort of an insect did enormous damage to Virginia timber. Several field stations have been opened for the purpose of determining the best method of treatment to save the timber.

The daughters of the Confederacy have undertaken a campaign to induce the horse women of the South to return to the use of the sidesaddle. The custom of riding astride is becoming more popular each year and the above organization fears that unless it is stopped it will become as popular here as in the north and west. All the ladies who quite recently took part in a Confederate reunion rode on sidesaddles and they certainly did look fine. They, one and all, say that the custom of the western plains is not the accepted equine pattern of the southland, which even today retains many of its prejudices and views of the styles that mostly pertain to womanly modesty. Women may be seen here and there riding astride, but not near as many as in the north and west; and those who do ride astride, in vindication of their doing so, cite the testimony of medical authorities, that it is much more beneficial for women to ride astride. These daughters of the Confederacy have, however, adopted certain resolutions on the subject. One of these runs something like the following: "Resolved, that we hereby avow our determination of this threatened invasion of our social economics and formally enter our solemn protest against it, etc., etc." They ask all good women everywhere to unite and place the seal of their condemnation upon this and every other quasi vulgar fashion that are trust upon us by other communities to the end that they may keep as long as possible in their original purity the custom of their southland. Selah. There are many of the old customs of this country that have faded away before the progressive northerner. I said to a friend a few days ago that northern trains and big dollars had worked wonders in the glorious southland.

By the way, I have had snaps and string beans for dinner thirty-six days in succession, with a break of one Sunday and that in Chattanooga when I had the pleasure of eating with Mrs. Charles Smith and a bunch of friends. Yours truly,

M. P. Heckerman.

The attendance at Walnut Grove Sunday was the largest in the history of the camp for the first Sunday. All the services were largely attended. The collections exceeded all former offerings. Although the crowds were large, the order was excellent.

The camp will continue throughout the week. Thursday was Missionary day. Miss Viola Hershey, returned missionary, spoke during the morning and afternoon. Saturday will be Temperance day. Rev. H. S. Brunser will deliver an illustrated address at 2:30 p. m. Sunday afternoon evangelistic services will be conducted by J. G. Snyder of Altoona. Camp will close Sunday evening.

At the last commencement of the Lock Haven State Normal School a large class graduated and it is interesting to note that the graduates of this high grade Normal School have no difficulty in securing positions as teachers. Several young men were elected to positions as teachers with salaries ranging from eighty to ninety dollars a month. Thirty-two of the graduating class had experience as teachers and they now have lucrative positions for next year. Many improvements are being made during the summer so that when the school opens on September 11th, everything will be in first class shape for the large school that is sure to enroll.

BILLY BOY

By MATT L. OSBORNE

Billy Boy sat on the garden steps and gloomily watched Belshazzar's frantic endeavor to dig out a mole. Time was when Billy would have seconded Belshazzar's efforts—but today he would scarce have turned his head to watch a circus parade. The somber black pall of utter desolation had settled over him and life, which once had seemed so fair, mocked him with its uselessness.

For Billy was in love, and his love was scorned, flaunted, derided and refused—and at Billy's age such things count. The iron had struck deep into his soul and broken off, and the barbs still rankled.

That he had reached the epochal age of ten before attaining the grand passion shows at least that he did not wear his heart upon his sleeve. Previously he had sauntered idly along the primrose path of dalliance, indulged in tentative flirtations with his nurse, his kindergarten teacher, and the pink-cheeked fairy with the flaxen curls who waved him generous kisses with her chubby hands from the adjoining lawn.

Once across the intervening hedge, he had shared with her a stick of exceedingly sticky candy; at another time he had graciously allowed her to inspect the burned finger that visibly attested his patriotic observance of the glorious Fourth—inwardly slated by her gasp of feminine horror when he undid the wrappings of the injured member.

Then had intervened a period during which he viewed the advances of the gentler sex with calm disdain, merging at times on distinct disfavor—as, for instance, when effusive feminine visitors of uncertain age, alluding to him as "the little dear," drew him inwardly raging against his fate, within their detested embrace and kissed his freckled face.

On the evening of his tenth birthday he had had a party—such a party! with oceans of pink lemonade and continents of angel cake, mountain ranges of ice cream, isthmuses of lady-fingers and island of cookies, principalities of pound cake and kingdoms of candy sufficient to allure the gloating gaze of the expectant guests—and cause a legion of little "tummies" to ache in cognate.

At the party she appeared, pink-cheeked, adorable dimpled, demure, looking for all the world as though she might have wandered, just awakened, from some huge gilt frame in the picture gallery—the type of little girl that one instinctively longs surreptitiously to pinch to convince one's self of her reality; also she lipped enchantingly, and at her advent Billy beheld his preconceived ideas of femininity take instant flight.

"But you must dance with the other little girls also," protested his mother, gently guiding his reluctant steps where duty pointed, "and I'm afraid Bessie's mamma would not like to have her eat more than four dishes of ice cream in one evening."

"Bessie—divine name!" After a month's devotion on his part, Bessie had passed him on the avenue that forenoon, seated in the donkey cart of the snub-nosed boy across the street, haughtily unconscious of his existence, while he of the snub nose had grinned at him offensively as they passed.

True, Billy had spattered casually across the street later in the day and gravely pummelled the snub-nosed one in the seclusion of the coach house till he howled for mercy, but this consummation of righteous vengeance was at best vicarious punishment for the fickle Bessie. So now, when Belshazzar cocked an inquiring ear in his direction and whined eagerly, Billy gloomily disdained his invitation to assist in excavating the mole, and with hands thrust deeply in his pocket viewed life darkly through disillusioned eyes.

Appeared presently around the corner of the house Billy's big uncle Jack, likewise engulfed in gloom, with hands in pockets and unlighted pipe despondently aslant, who seated himself beside Billy upon the steps and watched Belshazzar's efforts dejectedly.

An Uncle Jack unsociable, untalkative and downcast of men was distinctly new to Billy's experience that he viewed the phenomenon with wonderment. Could it be possible that the barbed shafts of jealousy had likewise entered his soul? With chin in hand Billy pondered upon the problem in silence.

Ah! he had it. The cause of Uncle Jack's woe was plain to him. Around the fickle, the inconstant Bessie revolved an attendant satellite yelped Aunt Agatha, after whom Billy had lately observed his Uncle Jack dangling quite disgracefully, though why Billy could not understand, certainly she was not pretty—that is, from Billy's standpoint—lacking the adorable Bessie's pink cheeks and infantile plumpness, likewise her bewitching lips.

Then, too, she blushed if spoken to suddenly, which Billy regarded as a foolish habit, and once in the early stages of their acquaintance when he had shown her a little green snake no longer than that, she had shuddered with horror and begged him to take the horrid thing away, whereupon he had stuffed the offending reptile back into his pocket together with this handkerchief, three china marbles, and a lump of chewing gum, and stalked disdainfully away.

Still, if Uncle Jack liked that sort of a girl—all right. There was no accounting for tastes.

Belshazzar, despairing at last of capturing the mole, cocked an ear inquiringly at each of his audience in turn, and neither offering further diversion, curled himself up comfortably between Billy's feet and went to sleep. Billy cogitated further. Uncle Jack had openly evinced a pronounced fondness for the society of Bessie's aunt, and now when by all precedent he should have been playing golf with her, he was sitting on the garden steps staring gloomily at nothing.

For this state of affairs there could be but one plausible explanation. Bessie's aunt had deceived Uncle Jack, even as Bessie had deceived him. Girls were all alike.

Then suddenly he remembered having seen her whizzing down the avenue earlier in the day in Mr. Stanhope's auto, with Mr. Stanhope at the steering wheel. That luckless individual had once patronizingly addressed him as "my little man," and Billy detested him accordingly.

"I'll punch him," reflected Billy aloud, vindictively.

"Who—what?" asked Uncle Jack, startled.

"Mr. Stanhope," explained Billy. "I saw Bessie's aunt out riding with him in his auto."

Uncle Jack stared. Then he laughed. "Well you are an observant little beggar," he conceded admiringly. "Though that isn't the root of the difficulty, Billy Boy. Mr. Stanhope is merely an accessory after the fact—non particeps criminis, as it were."

This being too deep for Billy's comprehension, he ignored it and opened up a new line of investigation. "What is the matter, then?" he demanded calmly.

"We quarreled," confessed Uncle Jack.

"What about?" Billy's inquisitorial tone was recognized and feared on occasions by all the family.

Uncle Jack shrugged his shoulders. "You can search me," he answered expressively. "I don't know what about. The fact remains that we did quarrel, and now she won't speak to me, so I can't tell her I'm sorry and ask her to make up."

"Are you sorry?" demanded Billy.

"Oh, yes, I'm sorry all right," admitted Uncle Jack with a rueful laugh. "However, that don't mend matters any, so don't bother your curly head about it, Billy Boy. You'll have troubles of your own some day."

Billy thought of the inconstant Bessie and wisely remained silent.

Belshazzar, waking, stretched himself lazily and wandered out of sight around the corner of the house. Billy, absorbed in thought, followed. If Uncle Jack really wanted to make up, surely Bessie's aunt ought to be informed of the fact.

"I'll go tell her," decided Billy sagely.

Behold then presently Billy trudging sturdily up the street with Belshazzar tagging happily at his heels. When he had turned the first corner he spied Bessie's aunt, book in hand, comfortably ensconced in a hammock in the shelter of a tiny summer house. Making their way directly across the lawn, Billy and Belshazzar appeared before her with disconcerting suddenness.

"Why—how do you do, Billy Boy?" said Bessie's aunt a little uncertainly. It was hard to presage what a visit from Billy might portend.

"How do you do?" responded Billy with owl-like gravity; then wrinkling his forehead thoughtfully, he regarded her with unwinking gaze for an appreciable space of time.

"I don't think you're pretty," he stated at last judicially.

Bessie's aunt laughed deliciously. "To tell the truth, Billy," she admitted confidentially, "I don't think so either."

"But I guess my Uncle Jack does," continued Billy, whereat Bessie's aunt forgot to laugh and blushed instead. "And he don't know what you and him quarreled about," went on Billy gravely, "but he's sorry anyway, and it wasn't about Mr. Stanhope, because he says Mr. Stanhope is a non—something that I forget, but if I was Uncle Jack I'd punch him," said Billy, doubling up his fists belligerently. "Anyway, I think Uncle Jack is lots nicer than Mr. Stanhope," he added.

"So do I," admitted Bessie's aunt, after thoughtful consideration. "And did you say he was sorry?" she asked. Billy nodded emphatically.

"Well—if he's sorry—" Bessie's aunt was visibly impressed.

"Why—there's Uncle Jack now!" announced Billy, pointing an accusing finger. "Uncle Jack! Uncle Jack!" he called shrilly.

Uncle Jack turned his head, but it was not at Billy that he looked. He must have read forgiveness in the glance of Bessie's aunt, for a moment later he was crossing the lawn.

"I'm afraid my small nephew has been disturbing you," he apologized, picking up the book that Bessie's aunt had conveniently dropped, and carefully restoring it to her.

"Not in the least," smiled Bessie's aunt. "We've been exchanging confidences on—oh, lots of personal matters." She hunted diligently for the place she had lost when she dropped the book. "He says you are sorry."

"I am abjectly repentant," he assured her gravely.

Bessie appeared, pink-cheeked, adorably dimpled, demure. At sight of Billy she chewed reflectively on one chubby finger and smiled at him ingenuously.

"Leth go see my white rabbit, Billy," she cooed alluringly. Billy went.

Mixed Metaphor.

The famous commingling of metaphors beginning, "I smell a rat; I shall nip him in the bud," has been surpassed. According to London Punch a Yorkshire paper writes: "We hope Mr. Atkinson will keep his word and, with the ability he has always shown, tear to shreds and tatters the subterranean methods of the clique which at present rides the high horse."

GRAFT'S UGLY SHADOW

By M. J. PHILLIPS

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

"I'm afraid they've got to young Callendar," observed the lieutenant-governor, as he sat at lunch with his family.

"Just what do you mean by 'got to'?" asked Mrs. Maitland.

The lieutenant-governor smiled. "Politics is death to grammar," he owned. "What I mean is, that the railroad crowd has won him over."

Alice Maitland looked up quickly. "Really, papa?"

"So it seems. I heard Ackerman, whose notorious 'pie-bill' comes up this afternoon, tell the railroad attorney, Banks, that he could handle Callendar, because they went to school together. Later I surprised Callendar and Ackerman in close conference."

"If the bill passes, it means millions to the C. & Z. system. And they are spending money like water to pass it."

"And Mr. Callendar—" The girl started to ask a question, and paused.

The lieutenant-governor nodded his head regretfully. "That's the way it looks. Politics has spoiled him, as it has many another young man who was thrust into public life without proper testing and preparation."

"Robert Callendar was a country lawyer when an accident sent him to the state senate. He got into a much more expensive way of living since he came here. He owns a dress suit now, and has rooms in a good hotel. He's spent all his salary."

"But, papa, has all that hurt him?" asked his daughter. "Hasn't his experience here broadened him, taught him something about the world, fitted him to be a better lawyer?"

"Mr. Maitland smiled a trifle grimly. "He's learned the bad as well as the good. He wanted to go back home, I imagine, with something to show for his seven months in the senate. When your salary's gone, there's only one way to get it—graft."

"Graft!" echoed Mrs. Maitland.

Alice started at the ugly word. "But, papa, are you sure?"

He shook his head. "No, I'm not sure; but appearances are against

She slipped up the narrow corridor to the rear of the senate chamber, through a maze of committee room passages, until she stood just outside a doorway a few feet from the raised desk of the lieutenant-governor.

Evidently the warm summer sun had its effect on the senate. There was a general air of somnolency in the great room. Her father, lounging in his leather chair, seemed on the verge of nodding; the senators were yawning, reading, or gazing out the windows; the pages moved on leaden feet.

The clerk was droning over a roll-call, which he started just as she reached the doorway and caught the eye of the nearest page.

"Senator Callendar, please," she whispered to the boy.

The clerk was calling the "B's" when Callendar received her message. He rose and sauntered up the aisle, whispering to the clerk as he passed. In a moment he was before her.

His pale, preoccupied face brightened wonderfully at sight of her. "You're early," he said, extending his hand; "welcome to our humble abode."

As she heard his voice and took the proffered hand, all the misgivings and doubts slipped away. No one could look or speak as Robert Callendar looked and spoke and be dishonest. A sense of peace was with her.

"You look tired," she said, impulsively.

"I am." He frowned absently, and then shook himself together. "I'm tired of it all. I want to get back home again, and stay there. I feel these seven months have been almost wasted."

"I am sure your constituents will not say so," she defended.

He smiled with wry humor. "They'll say I might better have stayed there and paid the mortgage on my farm," he said, frankly. "They'll pretend to think mother's starving before now."

"You have your record," she observed, loyally.

"They think it's as poor as the next ones," he shrugged. "But I don't care what they say. I'm through with politics. I've just been casting up what it's cost me. I brought some money when I came—not much, but quite a little for a poor man. That's all gone, and my salary, too."

"I don't regret the time I've spent here, though," he continued thoughtfully. "It's been a play spell, and I never had one before. There were many things which I learned that will help me in my practice. And," his boyish face lighted with the smile that unconsciously won him friends, "I've met a lot of real people—your mother and father among the rest, and—you."

There was no mistaking the accent on the last word. Alice Maitland's face flushed and her heart beat quickly. But she fought down the agitation which the caressing tone aroused.

"After all," he mused, "when the tumult and the shouting die away, that's all there is to politics; the friends one makes, the people one learns to love," he finished softly.

"What about the Ackerman bill?" asked Miss Maitland.

"We've handed the C. & Z. something that will hold them for awhile!" he replied triumphantly. "That's one reason I'm glad I've been here. Ackerman and I were boys together, and he presumed on that old friendship. He tried to bribe me this morning."

The face of the young attorney hardened into sternness. "Offered me the job of railroad attorney at $3,000 a year if I'd vote for his bill."

"You refused," replied Alice, with happy certainty.

"Well, I told him I'd move to table the bill this afternoon. If he didn't consent to its dying that way, I threatened to tell the senate of his offer. He gave in—at least he said he would. I made the motion just before you came, and gave the clerk my vote as I passed. Boy!" He beamed a dawdling page. "What was the vote on the motion to table?"

"Seventy-six for, six against," replied the youngster. "Say, the reporters are looking for you, senator. You got a big 'rep' for killing the bill."

Apparently the senator did not hear for a moment. He was looking into the eyes of Alice Maitland, reading what he saw mirrored there—reading with love and reverence and a touch of awe.

Then he roused himself. "Tell the reporters I won't be back this afternoon."

And they went away together.

As to the Dust Belt.

"How high above the world does the dust belt go, I wonder?" said Mrs. Billtops to Mr. B. "Here we are living in the sixth floor, but the dust seems to come in just the same as it would on the ground floor; we have to keep dusting all the time. You wouldn't think it would be like that, would you? You wouldn't think that we would have so much dust up here on this floor? How high would we have to go to get where you didn't have to be continually dusting?"

And Mr. Billtops said that as to that, really, he couldn't say; but that when he went downtown that morning he'd go up into some of the tall buildings there, up twenty or thirty stories high, and see if they had dust just the same up there; see if it was likely that they could find any relief from dust at home by moving up a few stories there; and he'd let her know.—New York Sun.

Not So Strange.

She—Isn't it strange that men seldom write poems on love after they are married?

He—Oh, I don't know. I never heard of a man writing a poem on the ocean after an attack of seasickness.

THE BEST SHOW

in your city this week, or any week, is the display of Men's Wear at our stores.

The "ALCO SYSTEM" Clothes exhibit that we are making gives a splendid index of the really great advance in the making of men's ready-for-service suits; and it is done by the concentration of the makers' effort along the lines of building garments in their own workshops that will endure, and that also show how the care of minor details, no matter how small, make for a perfect whole.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY REMEDY
Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

Snookums

She was the littlest girl—the one on the end of the line to whom Denby "worked" in the kid song that was the excuse for the children's chorus. She was a mite with big blue eyes that saw more than was altogether good for a child of six, yet saw with unseeing eyes the undercurrent of evil that marred life "behind."

"Snookums," Denby had called her the opening night when her short legs refused to carry her off the stage with the others in the mad rush that was the wind-up of the song, and after that her real name of Polly Crane appeared only on the salary roll. The "Snookums" hit was a success.

Snookums worshiped Denby, who in his careless, good-natured way made a pet of the small child that contributed so materially to his own hit. The little girl came to love those moments when she sat on his lap with the spot light full on them and he sang to her the nursery rhymes that were so much funnier than the ones her mother sang, with so many lines that Snookums did not understand. Miss Carver used to stand behind them on the stage with her arm about Denby's neck; for Miss Carver was the biggest of the little girls, though she was Denby's wife.

Snookums was fond of Miss Carver, too; and as the song went on she used to reach up and press against her cheek the hand that rested lightly on Denby's shoulder.

There came a night when talk that had been growing increasingly frank in the company came to Edith Carver's ears. It was prefaced by the usual "My dear, I would not tell you this, but I think you really ought to know," but that brought cold comfort to the poor little woman for whom the honeymoon, which had consisted of three weeks of rehearsal and two months of playing, had scarcely ended.

They had warned her that Denby could not be held true, but she had shut her eyes and ears resolutely to the bits of gossip and tried to see the audacious glances with which Lottie Lorimer favored her husband. Now, however, she was brought squarely face to face with her trouble.

"I know about Miss Lorimer—last night," she whispered.

"Just a little supper," he whispered back crossly. "You had a headache and I was lonesome."

"There was the club," reminded Edith. "You told me you had gone there."

"I was going," but Miss Lorimer came along and said she was hungry, too; so I said, 'Come along, kid, and she came."

Edith started a retort, but at the moment her cue came. Grasping Denby's hand, they ran out upon the stage laughing with the fictitious laughter that on the stage hides many a broken heart. The audience saw nothing of the tragedy, but wise little Snookums was a witness to the scene.

Denby's voice sounded as funny as ever, but it seemed to Snookums that there was a worried look about the mouth in spite of its painted smile.

Perhaps because he felt the need of working hard, Denby did better than usual in the kid song. When he came off the stage at the close of the act he swung the child up to his shoulder.

"Still love me, Snookums?" he asked with a laugh that he did not altogether feel.

The child shook her curly head gravely.

"What's the matter?" he asked, with an affection of surprise.

"I don't like men who don't hold hands with their wives," she explained gravely. "Mamma and papa didn't hold hands and then I didn't have any papa."

"That was very sad," commented Denby with pretended gravity. "But it doesn't always happen that you lose papas when they don't hold hands."

"Yes, you do!" persisted Snookums. "And you was holding hands with other girls. I saw you holding hands with Miss Lorimer. I don't like Miss Lorimer."

Denby looked across the stage to where Edith was just emerging from her dressing room. Then he glanced down the corridor where Lottie Lorimer, unconscious of his glance, was flirting with the stage clearers and using her eyes as effectively upon them as she had done with him.

"Anyone to keep in practice on," muttered Denby in sudden realization of the situation. "I guess you're right, Snookums," he agreed. "I've been pretty much of a fool, but I guess it isn't too late to mend and—well—you run along. I've got some mending to do."

He swung her down from his shoulder and made his way across the stage to where Edith was standing.

"Out of the mouths of babes cometh wisdom," he quoted softly. "Snookums has been showing me what a miserable fellow I have been, Edie. Will you kiss and make up, dear?"

"Mercy! It will spoil my make-up," she protested; but she lifted her carnal lips to his and joyfully ran off to the dressing room to remake the cupid's bow.

Denby went back to his position on the other side of the wings to wait the rising of the curtain. As the girls trooped on to take their positions for the opening of the second act, Lottie paused beside the comedian.

"Going out tonight?" she asked.

"With my wife," explained Denby; and Snookums, hearing the speech, picked up her tiny skirts and danced with joy.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson VII.—Third Quarter, For Aug. 13, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Jer. xxxv, 20-32. Memory Verses, 23, 24—Golden Text. Isa. xl, 8—Commentary by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

There are to me two great foundation truths throughout the whole Bible—"God is love" and "The Lord is not willing that any should perish." These very words are found in I John iv, 8, 16; II Pet. iii, 9, but these truths are everywhere in the book. Note the reason He gives why Jeremiah is to write this particular book, "that they may return every man from his evil way, that I may forgive their iniquity and their sin" (verse 3).

We know from chapter xxxii, 1, 2, that Jeremiah was a prisoner during part of Zedekiah's reign, but we also find him a prisoner in today's lesson, the events of which occurred in the fourth year after the death of good King Josiah (verses 1, 5). He suffered much because of the Lord's message, which he so faithfully delivered, "so much that he said at one time, 'I was like a lamb or an ox that is brought to the slaughter,' and at another time he said, 'I am in derision daily; every one mocketh me; * * * I will not make mention of Him; nor speak any more in His name.'" (chapters xl, 19; xli, 7-9).

He did not keep this resolution, for the fire was so hot within him that he could not but speak. This makes us think of Peter and John in Acts iv, 19, 20: "May we all have the same fire in us." Baruch was evidently Jeremiah's scribe who did the writing for him and to whom he said at this very time, as we read in Jer. xlv, "Seeketh thou great things for thyself? Seek them not; for I was a message from the Lord to him through Jeremiah. Let us take it too."

Notice in verses 4-7, 17, 18, how this book was written. The words were the Lord's, the mouth was Jeremiah's, and the pen was Baruch's. That is inspiration. The Lord did not give Jeremiah the thoughts, that he might put them into words, but He gave him the very words. Hear David also concerning the psalms which he wrote, "The Spirit of the Lord spake by me, and His word was in my tongue" (II Sam. xxiii, 2). This is in perfect accord with II Pet. i, 21.

As Jeremiah was shut up, Baruch was to take the book and read from it to all the people the words of the Lord in the Lord's house. This he did in the ninth month of the fifth year of Jehoiakim as the people were gathered on the fasting day (verses 6, 9). Then went one and told the princes what he had heard, and the princes sent for Baruch, that he might come and read to them the words of the book. This he did, and although the words made them afraid, they said, "they would tell the king these words. So they kept the book, but advised Baruch that he and Jeremiah would do well to hide where no one could find them."

The Lord evidently guided them where to hide, for it is said, "The Lord hid them" (verses 19, 20). The Lord so hid Elijah that no one could find him (I Kings xvi, 3; xviii, 10), and all true believers should greatly rejoice in Col. iii, 3, "Your life is hid with Christ in God."

After the princes told the king what they had heard from the book he had brought and read to him in the presence of all princes as he sat in the winter house with a fire burning on the hearth before him (verses 20-22). As the king heard it he deliberately cut it with his penknife, portion by portion, and cast it into the fire until he had burned up the whole book. Although several pleaded with him not to burn it, he would not listen to them. None present seemed to be afraid nor rend their garments, for were they not in the presence of the king and therefore safe in indulging what he did? Besides, a king who would send into Egypt for a prophet in order to kill him might not hesitate to kill some of them if they stood against him.

If we live in the fear of the Lord we will not fear the face of man nor what man may do unto us, but the devil has said, "All that a man hath will he give up for his life" (Job ii, 4), and that is true of many of the devil's people, but should not be true of any child of God.

One would think that the message of verses 29-31 to Jehoiakim would make any ordinary man to tremble, but we read that "they heartened not." So blind and deaf does the devil make his followers to all but his suggestions. A servant of the Lord, on the contrary, should be blind and deaf to all but His face and His voice. Such was Jeremiah. See also what is written of our Lord in Isa. xlii, 1, 19.

Jeremiah was ordered to write the same words, with many more, on a new roll (verse 32), and thus vain were the king's efforts to destroy the words he did not like. There are many today who dislike many words in the book, such as those concerning the incarnation, the Deity and the sinless humanity of Jesus Christ, the resurrection of the body, His return in glory, but most of all that there is no redemption but by His precious blood and that those who reject Him must go to the lake of fire. But His word stands and is forever settled in heaven.

NEWSPAPER ARCHIVE

NEWSPAPER ARCHIVE

Brooklyn, N. Y., August 6.—Notwithstanding the summer season Brooklyn Tabernacle was crowded to-day. Pastor Russell took for his text the words of the Prophet David, "Whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, Thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, behold, Thou art there" (Psalm cxxxix, 7, 8). He said:

We are living in a day when money, pleasure and pain seem to be the assets of the masses. The Evolution theory and Higher Criticism of the Bible have fostered unbelief to such an extent that everything intangible is doubted. Beginning with the college professor and the majority of the educated ministers this skepticism has embraced the wealthy, who are satiated with the blessings of prosperity. To these heaven and heavenly things seem vagaries as compared with present enjoyments and hopes. Not for a long time have these believed in and feared eternal torment. And their present attitude is one of doubt respecting everything connected with the Bible. They well know that outside the Bible there is nothing but guess work, and they prefer their own guesses to those of other people. Very many of them speak candidly and tell that they are agnostics, that they are uncertain and would like to be informed respecting the future.

A very similar condition growingly prevails amongst the poorer classes and the uneducated, who say, We believed the scholars when they told us the Bible was inspired. Why should we not believe them now when they declare that it is a fraud? As the wealthy doubt that God will specially favor them, so the poor doubt whether God will specially disfavor them. Both classes are reaching the conclusion that fortune or disaster rests, not with the Lord, but with themselves.

The World's Need—A God

The effect of all this loss of faith in an Almighty God is seen on every hand and is felt by many. One of the consequences is that the religious element of man's nature is becoming numb and the masses, rich and poor, are seeking a substitute in pleasure; as the Apostle's words foretold, they are "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Additionally, many of the wealthy carry on a kind of brigandage along commercial lines. Desirous of imitating them, but unable so to do, others are filling the world with violence to an extent that is alarming to everybody. Were it not for our elaborate and costly police protection life and property would be far less secure in civilized lands than amongst the heathen. With all the protection afforded by telephone, telegraph, police, etc., etc., our rulers and officials tell us that they are often bewildered in their attempts to preserve law and order.

Many learned men believe that there is no other God than Nature; and many of the unlearned are following their lead. They reason that Nature served them as both father and mother, that Nature is pitiless, unsympathetic, cruel. Indeed, this is one of their special arguments against a personal God, for they say that such a God would not permit the sufferings we witness on every hand and the still more terrible sufferings which the creeds of Christendom have taught them are in store for all except the saintly few.

It is time that we return to the Bible proposition and see the truth of the statement, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." Surely there is something wrong with the brain which, after noting the wonders of nature, seen in the surrounding worlds and systems and attested in all matters earthly, sees not an intelligent Creator! The wonderful adaptability of our own bodies tells of a wise Creator.

If we compare the human eye, adapted to its purposes and conditions, with the eye of a fish, adapted to its different conditions, and with the eye of a beetle, adapted to still different conditions, we see the most indubitable proofs of profoundest wisdom and superhuman skill. When we think of man's wonderful powers and of his great achievements in the world and then consider his inability to make a single living thing, from a microbe to an elephant, from a tiny seed to a tree, surely we should concede that the One who ordered nature in the production of these wonderful variations, and created man himself, must be an Almighty, intelligent God. Surely "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge" along these lines, to those who have the eyes of understanding to see. It is time that these great truths were being emphasized and that the boastful gentlemen who ignore them should have their true measure taken, regardless of how many titles may follow their names. The moderately educated as well as the illiterate need such a testimony to come from every pulpit. And if it does not soon come our civilization will be wrecked.

All-Seeing Eye Not Omnipresence

"Thou, God, seest me;" "The eye of the Lord is in every place." These Scriptures give us the proper conception of the Almighty. As with the telescope, the microscope, the telephone, etc., man can enlarge his range of vision and hearing, so by powers still more wonderful the Almighty is cognizant of all the affairs of the Universe. We grant that our feeble minds are unable to comprehend so great, so universal an Intelligence.

We cannot know in what manner the angels, the spirit servants of God, are, as His eyes, in every place, to take cognizance of our affairs. We cannot know in what manner the electric or lightning flash serves as a Divine messenger. But we can believe that a Soul—so infinitely high above us possesses powers of information as far beyond our comprehension as the telephone and wireless telegraphy and electric light were beyond the comprehension which our forefathers had of these things in their day. It is easier to believe that so great a Being as the One who formed man should have all wisdom and all power than to believe Him deficient of these. The Scriptural argument is a good one: "He that formed the eye, shall He not see? He that formed the ear, shall He not hear?"

God in Heaven and in Hell

The creeds handed down to us from the dark past declare that God is everywhere present—omnipresent. This is as unthinkable as it is foolish and unsupportable. Taking advantage of this error of "orthodoxy," the Adversary has turned many away from a belief in a personal God, He who is everywhere is nowhere. The result is the absurd view which has taken hold on some otherwise intelligent people, to the effect that good and God are synonymous. Hence a log of wood that is good for something, that can be made into something useful, is said to have good in it, and, hence, to have God in it—ditto, a piece of iron, a bed, a chair, a table. The folly grows into saying that God is everywhere and is in everything. Thus faith in a "god of nature and happen-so" takes the place of faith in the God of the Bible, whose residence is in heaven, but whose intelligence and power extend throughout the Universe, in thousands of ways of which we are only learning—through electricity, radio activity, etc., besides angelic messengers that can come and go like the wind.

Our text, misunderstood, is supposed to teach Divine omnipresence, whereas it really teaches Divine omniscience and Almighty power. The Lord's presence, as represented in His intelligence and power, are everywhere. Nowhere could we go to be beyond His reach and beyond His knowledge. Were this thought thoroughly impressed upon every human mind, what a vast difference it would make in human conduct from that now seen—in Wall Street, in banks, in palaces, in hovels, in saloons, in gambling houses—everywhere. It is the great lesson needed by the whole world. Everyone who believes this should join with nature in attesting Divine Wisdom, Power, Justice and Love.

But really the undermining of faith in the God of the Bible has been accomplished largely by the misrepresentation of the Bible's teaching. Our text, for instance, is supposed to teach that God is in heaven with the saintly, rejoicing with them and enjoying their pleasure and that He also is in hell with the unsaintly, looking upon their sufferings and tortures and planning with devils for their everlasting continuance. Thinking minds are rejecting such nonsense, but, alas, they are rejecting the Bible, too, hence have no foundation for a better, truer faith.

Every educated minister knows that I tell the Truth to the common people when I say that the word hell in our text has not the slightest reference to a place of torture, or even of consciousness. Indeed this is true of every occurrence of the word hell, from Genesis to Malachi. In every instance the translation is from the same Hebrew word, sheol, which is now a summer as well as a winter remedy. It has the same invigorating and strength-producing effect in summer as in winter. Try it in a little cold milk or water. ALL DRUGGISTS signifies the grave, the tomb, and is thus most frequently translated.

I urge upon all ministers of education to join with me in explaining to the public the true meaning of the Hebrew word sheol and the Greek word hades. Whatever may have been their thought of expediency in the past they should see that the mistaken views of the meaning of these words are undermining the faith of Christendom.

The Psalmist really said, "If I ascend up into the sky, Thou art there; if I make my bed in sheol (the grave) behold, Thou art there. * * * In the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me and Thy right hand shall hold me." The thought is that the Divine Power is everywhere, that whether we live or die, nothing can separate us from God's Wisdom and Power and from the ultimate accomplishment of our rescue from the power of the grave, which God has purposed and has promised shall be done through the great Messiah. For His Kingdom we wait and pray.

Is This View Unorthodox?

The word orthodox signifies "correct in doctrine." I am ready to admit that my presentation is not the ordinary one—but I claim that it is correct, that it is the true doctrine of the Word of God. If so, it is orthodox, in the highest sense of that term, and everything to the contrary, being opposed to the standards of God's Word, must be unorthodox. Everything depends upon our standard. I stand for the Bible, its teaching, its doctrines, and therefore am orthodox. On the contrary, Higher Critics and Evolutionists and those who hold the creeds of the "Dark Ages," contradictory to the Bible, are proportionately unorthodox—heretical.

What Christendom needs today is a return to the Bible, an investigation of its teachings and, correspondingly, a rejection of all human creeds, which are admittedly more or less defective. Let us "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free." Let us accept the Bible as the only standard. Let us study it and understand it to the extent of our ability. Let us rejoice in every degree of harmony we all attain in the correct understanding of it. Let us fellowship as Christians all who acknowledge its Divine authenticity and who, in harmony with its presentation, are trusting in Jesus as their Redeemer; and who, in acceptance of His invitation, have forsaken all to be His footstep followers.

These are the real Christians, with whatever sect or party they may have become identified, through the supposition that they were doing the will of God. These alone are the saints; these alone are running in the race course; these alone have the opportunity of making their "calling and election sure." The masses known as Christendom are unchristian in every sense of the word. They are civilized heathen, in the sense that they do not recognize any more than do the heathen, a personal God of glorious character, perfect in His Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power. They realize not His All-seeing Eye. And their general lives show their lack of this knowledge and this faith.

More than this (shall we say it?) the majority of professed church members, so far as we can understand their sentiments as privately expressed and publicly declared by the ministers of their choice, are no more Christians than are the Jews. They neither believe the Bible to be the Divine Revelation nor do they accept the Lord Jesus Christ as the world's Redeemer from sin and death. Of course, therefore, they do not profess to consecrate their lives to sacrificially follow One in whose redemptive work they do not believe.

The Mystery of the Cross

Comparatively few of the hundreds of thousands of those who have named the name of Christ, and who have come under various denominational yokes, have any knowledge of the Mystery of the Cross of Christ, the Mystery of the Gospel, "The Mystery which hath been hid from ages and generations, but now is made manifest to his saints" (Colossians 1, 26).

Alas, the majority seem content to have merely a "name to live" and wish merely to be called Christians and to wear a jeweled cross. It is but the few of those who have tasted that the Lord is gracious and have felt an earnest desire to know and to do the Father's will at the cost of self-sacrifice. With the majority the intimation that a certain course in life is the "narrow way," the way of the Cross, is sufficient to turn them in an opposite direction; for, while they would like to share the heavenly glories and honors of the Lord, they are unwilling to be sharers in His ignominy, sufferings and death.

These, without relinquishing their desire for righteousness, are disinclined to go to such lengths as the Master and the Apostles taught and exemplified. Hence, they are not interested in the "deep things" of God's Word, but merely in the more superficial. In the language of the Scriptures, they are willing to say, "We will eat our own bread, and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by thy name, to take away our reproach" (Isaiah iv, 1).

The fault lies largely with many of the clergy, who are not leading the people to "the faith once delivered to the saints," but away from it.

The Scriptures most distinctly teach that we are under the reign of the "Prince of this world," Satan, and that our Lord at His Second Coming in power and great glory will bind or restrain this strong one and overthrow his empire, which is not of Divine authorization, but built upon human weaknesses, ignorance and superstition. We are distinctly told that Satan shall be bound for that thousand years (the Millennium) that he may deceive the people no more until the thousand years shall be finished.

Surely, then, the Lord has used the great Adversary to assist in the accomplishing of the Divine purposes. Satan may have supposed that he was frustrating God's plans, but just as surely he was mistaken. The Divine Word is sure which declares, "My Word that goeth forth out of My mouth shall not return unto Me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in that whereto I send it."

It is time that all who really believe in the Bible, who really believe that Jesus left the glory of the Father and humbled Himself even unto death, thus providing the redemption price for the Church and for the world, should proclaim these facts clearly, positively. They should also declare, as do the Scriptures, the Second Coming of the Redeemer and the establishment of His Kingdom in Divine power and majesty, for the putting down of sin and the lifting up of mankind to glorious privileges of restitution, with a just penalty against every form of sin, and the Second Death as the penalty for wilful, persistent disobedience.

Surely Queen of All Hens.

A certain industrious hen, interested in the welfare of Petaluma, Cal., has gone so far in her efforts to spread the renown of the city of eggs and broilers that she recently placed four yolks in one shell. Her zeal was discovered by a firm of egg merchants, Whitcomb & Baker. The egg was slightly larger than normal. It looked like a regular egg until a candle gave an X-ray view of four small yolks. A hunt is still being made to locate the hen. In the same shipment were a number of other eggs containing two yolks, but the egg with the four yolks is said to break all records.

Radium Breezes for Gout.

Radium laden breezes are the very latest thing in the treatment of gout. One of the papers read at the German Medical congress was on the application of radium in the aerial state. Radium "emanatoria" have been established in Berlin and at Bad Homburg, and now Ems is to have one. A special apparatus in which radium is placed in a current of air is fixed in a room and all the patients have to do is to sit in the room and talk or read newspapers, or play draughts; the radium in solution in the air does the rest and affects the blood through the lungs. This treatment is especially recommended for all gouty ailments.

Dr. D. G. Carey, Elmira, N. Y., "Dear Doctor:—Am desirous of giving you a voluntary testimonial, which you can publish if you so desire. I was perfectly helpless for over three months with rheumatism and kidney disease. Had three physicians during this time, and none of them helped my case, and I grew gradually worse. Through a friend I heard of Dr. Daniel G. Carey, and sent for him, but with little faith. He came, and under his treatment, using prescriptions No. 555 for rheumatism and Marsh Root No. 777 for the kidneys, I was able to walk outdoors in three weeks, and in two months was a well man. THING HE CAN'T DO WITHOUT

His Regular Sleep, and This He Finds He Must Have at His Regular Hours.

"One thing that I find I must have," said a man of mature years, "is sleep, and in order to keep fit and able to work I must not only have my full amount of sleep, but I must have it in my regular sleeping hours."

"When I was a youngster I could go without sleep, or I could take an hour or two at any time of the night and get up the next morning and go at it fresh as a daisy, but it isn't so now. If I cut off an hour or two's sleep now I am dull next day. Not until the next day after that, after a full night's sleep, do I come back all right. And even after my full number of hours of sleep, if these have been begun an hour or two later than usual, with the sleep continued later, I don't feel chipper; I must have my full sleep in my regular hours. I account for this on the supposition that I now have strength enough to keep me going through the day in good shape, just so long and no longer; if I work or sit up later I overtax my strength and so make myself correspondingly overtired; and to recover from this I must come back to my accustomed ways of living."

GRIPS AS MUSCLE BUILDERS

Traveling Salesman Seems to Have Idea Which Might Really Be Called a Good One.

After dinner they were discussing athletics, and each had his favorite method of reducing or building up. The traveling salesman proudly called attention to a remarkable development of biceps which swelled up beneath his coat sleeve.

"Very good, indeed," said the professor, testing with his fingers. "How do you account for this?"

"My method is extremely simple and takes no time away from my work. In fact, it is a result. These muscles have been developed by carrying heavily loaded 'grips,' as we usually call our big handbags on the road. I always carry two, loaded as nearly alike as possible, so I shall not grow one-sided. I began with only one grip, and swung it from one hand to the other, as fatigue impelled, but I found that it is actually easier to carry two than one. I am perfectly balanced with two and I assure you I need no extra gym work for strengthening my arms, shoulders or back. I almost could carry a piano in each hand if the instruments were not so cumbersome."

When you have an elephant on hand, and he wants to run away, better let him run.—Lincoln.

Rapid Increase of Life.

As illustrating the enormous powers of reproductive increase in the vegetable world, the case of a common weed, the Slaymbrum Sophia, may be cited. This weed produces three-quarters of a million seeds, and, if they all grew and multiplied, would in three years cover the whole land surface of the globe. Darwin calculated that the slowest breeding of all animals, the elephant, would in 750 years, from a single pair, produce 19,000,000 individuals. Rabbits would, from a single pair, produce 1,000,000 individuals in four or five years.

SHADOWS

What if shadows come and go?
Shadows playing to and fro?
Sunshine playing with the night,
Darkness playing with the light:
Thro' all Life you find it true,
Shadows are what men pursue.

What if Love shall beckon thee?
'Tis no shadow that you see—
Men may Fortune,—Fame pursue,
They shall their mistake long rue;
Chasing shadows, lose Life's best,
Find in shadowed night their rest.

Then let shadows come and go,
Time's wide, ceaseless currents flow;
Sorrow's shade shall pass away,
Pleasure—Pain—Life—last a day,
Silent then all men shall pass,
As the shadows on the glass.

Men are shadows which pursue
Shadows—hopes—their whole life through.

Chasing Pleasure,—shunning Pain,
Spending Life in search of Gain;
Find at last Life's Pleasures' pass,
They've missed Love—the best of all.

Bedford Presbyterian Church

Two services of exceptional interest Sunday, August 13, as follows: 11 a. m., Divine Exchanges. A sermon by Rev. Henry B. Townsend of Philadelphia, former pastor of the church. Mr. Townsend's many friends will be happy to greet him Sunday morning, and listen to his message. 7:30 p. m., The Song He Wrote on the Wall. (If you wanted to print on the wall of your room the words of a song, what song would you choose? One man wanted to do that very thing. Who was the man? What was the song? Why this particular song? These questions are answered in the evening sermon of the pastor, Rev. Edward Franklin Reimer. A brief sermon about a big man. A short study of a sterling song. And, incidentally, a couple of facts not generally known.) To quiet the feverish pulse and to heal the hidden hurt there is no medicine for the soul like that administered by the Great Physician in the quiet of his House.
